

Rob Farnham

Musician, writer and actor.

Biography

Rob Farnham, is a talented musician and actor who was born in 1981. The son of legendary Australian singer John Farnham - he grew up with a passion for music and began playing guitar and performing with local bands in his home town of Melbourne, Australia a young age.

In 2001, Farnham landed his first acting role in the feature film The Wilde Girls (directed by Del Shores).

This was followed by a role in the 2002 feature film Queen of the Damned (directed by Michael Rymer).

In 2015, Farnham's band Rival Fire signed with Sony Music Australia. The band has since toured with popular Australian acts such as Butterfly Effect and Dead Letter Circus. They have also supported international acts - Birds of Tokyo and KISS.

The band have released two albums to date, showcasing Farnham's writing skills and powerful vocals.

Throughout his career, Farnham has proven himself to be a talented and versatile artist. He plans to continue writing more music, acting and developing screen plays and other creative projects.

Follow Rob

Instagram

Facebook

Spotify

YouTube

Official Website

Further Information

Rob is exclusively managed by Watercooler Talent.

For all enquires please get in touch.